STRAY STREAKS

(By Flake McFluke.)

There comes times when there isn't a streak to be struck, though we strike this way and that, and, in spite of all we can do we are stricken with failure.

Citizens of this town held a meeting a day or so back and unanimously decided to ask the Cumberland Telephone people to move their manager, Harris, to another place, or else require him to put a muffler on his watch when he cranks it up.

Mrs. Thomas came near letting John get clear away, before she came down and took him in tow this last time, but I feel "moren sartin" that the good lady is equal to the task, 'cause I can see a marked change in his conduct since she came, and I hereby extend congratulations for the splendid work with the Old Man.

We wish to pause just here, long enough to remind Uncle Tommy Bean and Ben Taylor, that there's only 69 more days 'twixt now and July the first.

Just about the time everything gets in good condition for fishing, the water warm, clear and nice, yes, and the signs just exactly at the right points, up comes another downpour of rain and muddies things all up again; thus the fisherman's dream of joyous spring life, to pleasure in-describable, in luring the wary bass from his watery lair into your life net, is squashed, squelched and smeared up again. By-heck.

One thing that gets our nanny good and stout is to have our wife send word down to the office by three or four different men along about 4 o'clock, P. M., to come home at once and help her a little bit in planting some garden stuff, and then when we get there, find our aforesaid wife on the front porch entertaining three or four neighbor women.

We always will believe that those callers were there when the come home, help message stuff was sent. It looks to us a right smart like the whole darned business was concocted and thought out, very carefully. We had a whole lot we aimed to say about the matter, but by the time we had shoveled a garden plow, hoveled and planted until dark, we didn't feel much like conversation stuff, so we have not mentioned it to our wife yet, so far.

Wade Balze had the gall to ask me, down at his place the other day if a lay man ever had spring fever. I say, how in thunder do you expect me to know, and then asked him if an industrious party ever had it. Mrs. Balze joined in and says, your fooling away your time asking Wade that question.

Every Farmer An Insurance Man!

We are experiencing the difficulties with reference to getting implements and hardware that we did in 1918 and for that reason we suggest that you buy early and insure yourself against being without when the time comes to use them.

It doesn't cost any more to buy early, you have the assurance that the tools will be at your service when you need them. We have all kinds of Farming Implements, Lime and Fertilizer Sowers, Wagons, Buggies, Ranges, Harness, Hardware and Farmers Supplies on our sample floor. Come in and look them over. A square deal at our store.

BEADS ODDLY STRUNG

(By L. D. Claire.)

Est Nall is tendin' to his big grape arbor mighty close since me and Tins agreed to furnish the sugar, and long about the old August election time we air goin' to make a big lot of grape juice.

For the benefit of my friends who may be plannin' to give me a tobacco shower on my birthday, I modestly mention the date as the third of May.

Tinsley's wife called him Monday afternoon to come home and work in the garden. He went at 6:58. Miss Tinsley told me she was a goin' to keep him at home Tuesday mornin' and I said amen. Enduring Tuesday night it rained, and when Tins came to the office the next mornin' the first thing he said was "God bless the man who invented rain." Miss Tinsley says she often wished Wilburn liked workin' in the garden like he does fishin'.

I've knowed a lot of travelin' salesmen, but Otto Martin is the first travelin' lawyer I ever knowed. Otto is gone about five days and three-quarters out of the week, 'ceptin when circuit court is a goin' on.

When Tins gets the fishin' fever there is nothin' sacred to him. He is even plannin' to desecrate my birthday, Saturday week, by spendin' it at the mouth of Grassy.

The humblest of us always has something to be thankful for. I'm a belin' thankful that I don't have no garden to work in this summer.

MacK Fogle is on the Dodge durin' circuit court, and he nearly always has somebody on the Dodge with him, too.

After stayin' with me nearly a month the Missus said she didn't believe none of them tales Tins has been tellin' on me and that she'd go back to Louisville feelin' perfectly safe about my rigidly upright conduct.
